givers in Ladies' Hall on Thursday evg., 8:00 ult., by Mr. W. A. Low, I.J.B., was fairly well attended.

Mr A. Hicks, principal of Delta High School acted as chairman, and opened the meeting by asking everyone to sing and sing "O Canada!" This was followed with a violin solo by Mr. Duxbury, accompanied by Mr. Rynning at the piano. The chairman, after a few introductory remarks, then called on the lecturer

Written or he held it in his hand as closely as possible, with something added of his own. The lecture that evening was on "The British Navy," which was often called "the silent service." He went on to tell when it was first organized, and gave an outline of the history of England from the Norman Conquest. By a map of the world he expounded the part the navy had played in the different oceans after the start of the Great War. He spoke of the enemy submarine warfare, and the measures Britain had taken to combat this menace to merchant shipping. He also told of the daring

Every Westerner knows that when EATON's says an article is "Horseshide," or "Rattles," or "Silk," or "All-Weather," or "Calafats"—then that statement may be accepted with the same confidence as an affidavit.

Before each Catalogue is printed, the EATON Research Bureau—a scientifically trained group of experts—reads every statement to be made regarding all merchandise presented, and rigidly strikes out any slightest exaggeration or hint of

A New British Fabric

Has All Qualities Of Cotton But With

Wool-Like Finish

The cotton industry in Great Britain has been languishing for some years owing to general depression and the Indian boycott, and that very fact has convinced the makers of a new fabric which may revolutionize the market and put Lancashire on the map without the spur of lost trade the industry might simply have been left to rot.

Out of evil cometh good, and with a textile machine, having all the excellent quality of cotton and the soft like finish, has the ambition of research in the cotton industry.

It is now an enormous task to Lancashire market cotton spinner by the makers has evolved a new method by which the new fabric can be produced without the aid of the spinning machine.

In short, a twill cotton yarn, well with results in the finished material which are likely to challenge the superiority of real silk and cause a frank effort on the part of researchers in the artificial silk laboratories.

Those who have seen and tested the new fabric will be made very soon have no hesitation in saying that it is made from really already existing materials, and that it is made made towards silk-cotton yarn.

Features of the new fabric are:

"It will black, dye or wash without losing its original quality.

"It is made from the best quality of cotton material while possessing the attributes of silk.

"For knitted underwear it is a highly desirable material, with the softness and the durability of cotton.

"A company has been formed to take over the production of this new material, being patented in most foreign countries, and has several patents which supersede other rights, frames or mules, will have to be built in England, and in Scotland, in the near future."—The Times.
